OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

SPECTATOR.

"The movement for the Endowment of Research is no longer the impracticable crusade which it appeared to be twelve months ago. The activity of its promoters, and the unexpected sympathy which it has inspired in official quarters, have enabled it to make its way into the arena of practical politics. In the struggle which is being carried on as to University reform, it is one of the forces which must be calculated for, and it is therefore extremely important that we should understand its direction and its aim. The volume before us throws welcome light upon much that was before vague or enigmatical in the programme of the new party."

WORLD.

"In the speech in which he introduced the Oxford Reform Bill, Lord Salisbury made himself the mouthpiece of the authors of Essays in aid of the Endowment of Research."

SATURDAY REVIEW.

"It is, then, a little remarkable that not one of them has even attempted to grapple with the real difficulties of the question."

ATHENAEUM.

"It is something, however, to have pointed out the want, and to have promoted its public recognition. We may now look confidently for future improvement to a set of opinion which has already far outrun the most sanguine anticipations of those who, when they originally appealed to it, did so with scarcely a hope of immediate success."

EXAMINER.

"The object of these essays is to expound a new conception of the proper employment of University endowments; or rather, as the writers seem disposed to put it, to recal men's minds to an old conception which has fallen into neglect."

ACADEMY.

"These essays, which are all written by advocates of what is called Endowment of Research in the Universities, will help to remove many false impressions on that subject. It will be clear from them that all that has been found to be good and useful at Oxford and Cambridge may remain undisturbed, and that there are ample resources to add to it all that the most ardent reformers can desire. The idea of changing the English into German Universities, of suppressing the College system, of substituting professorial for tutorial teaching, is not even mooted in any of these Essays. They are all occupied with the question how the present system of University education can be rendered more efficient, and how, by the side of it, or in the midst of it, all that is good in the German Universities, and much that even German Universities have not hitherto attempted, may be superadded."

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

"This volume of Essays pleads for the general recognition of principles which would aim at making our Universities the homes of more men like Professor Max Müller. . . . It is not urged that academical revenues should be devoted to that purpose exclusively."

LITERARY CHURCHMAN.

"This remarkable volume is the outward sign of an unmistakable 'set' which ideas are taking in our generation; and it is, moreover, the proof that scientific studies have entered upon a new phase. . . . It is certainly an astonishing volume."

ECHO.

"This volume contains the best information extant on a subject which, although of national importance, is as yet but imperfectly understood by the general public."

GLOBE.

"The present volume is a thoughtful contribution to the discussion of the subject."

TIMES.

"It is an injustice to an essay so brilliant and so suggestive as Mr. Pattison's to present it to our readers in the above brief and imperfect summary. It deserves the careful attention of all who are interested in the question of University organisation and reform. There can be no doubt that the question raised by Mr. Pattison in his concluding words will have to be discussed, and in some manner settled by the new Oxford Commissioners."

PALL MALL GAZETTE.

"Several of the earlier essays are of value in clearing the ground of the question. In particular, Mr. Cotton's essay on the intentions of the founders of fellowships is well worth study. . . . Dr. Appleton shows quite conclusively that the Endowment of Education is economically unsound in principle, and with great plausibility that the Endowment of Research is economically sound. . . . Assuming, as it is safe to assume, that some considerable reduction of the number of fellowships will take place, the question arises, What is to be done with the money? and the extreme difficulty of suggesting any more satisfactory answer than that offered by the advocates of the Endowment of Research gives the real strength to their proposals."

STANDARD.

"All our sympathies are with Mr. Pattison and his friends."

NATURE.

"Widely as we should wish to see this book read amongst the laymen of science, the Philistines and those who prophesy to them, politicians and practical reformers, it will certainly be found quite as valuable as by any of these by men of science. Men of science will find in the present volume data and suggestions which should aid them greatly, at this critical moment, to determine what they will urge upon the Government, as the fit relationship between the State and scientific research. . . . The eminence and competency of the writers give it an overwhelming force of authority and reason."
